Migration and Borders in the Twenty-First Century

Thursday, February 14, 2019 | 2:00PM - 4:00PM
Village West Building 2 Room 2C
University of California San Diego

Agenda

2:00pm – 2:20pm
Deterring Asylum Seekers and their Access to Rights
David FitzGerald
Co-Director, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies
Professor of Sociology, UC San Diego

2:25pm – 2:45pm
Climate Change and Human Migration
Kate Ricke
Assistant Professor, School of Global Policy and Strategy / Scripps Institution of Oceanography, UC San Diego

2:50pm – 3:10pm
The declining consensus on drug policy in the Americas
David Mares
Director, Center for Iberian and Latin American Studies, UC San Diego
Distinguished Professor of Political Science, UC San Diego

3:15pm – 3:35pm
A Nation of Immigrants and Borders: A Short History of American Immigration Law and Policy since 1965
S. Deborah Kang
Associate Professor of History, California State University, San Marcos
Visiting Scholar, Center for Comparative Immigration Studies, UC San Diego

3:40pm—4:00pm
U.S.-Mexico Relations Under Trump and Lopez Obrador
Rafael Fernández de Castro
Director, Center for U.S.—Mexican Studies
Professor, School of Global Policy and Strategy, UC San Diego
David Scott FitzGerald is Theodore E. Gildred Chair in U.S.-Mexican Relations, Professor of Sociology, and Co-Director of the Center for Comparative Immigration Studies. His research analyzes policies regulating migration and asylum in countries of origin, transit, and destination. FitzGerald’s forthcoming book, Refugee Beyond Reach: How Rich Democracies Repel Asylum Seekers (Oxford University Press 2019), analyzes how governments in North America, the EU, and Australia try to keep asylum seekers from reaching their territories.

Claire Adida is Associate Professor of Political Science at UCSD and Co-Director of the Center for Comparative Immigration Studies. She uses quantitative methods to research how countries deal with existing and new forms of diversity. She is the author of two books, Immigrant Exclusion and Insecurity in Africa (Cambridge University Press, 2014) and Why Muslim Integration Fails in Christian-Heritage Societies (Harvard University Press, 2016, co-authored with David Laitin and Marie-Anne Valfort).

Kate Ricke is an Assistant Professor at UC San Diego with joint appointment between the School of Global Policy and Strategy and the Scripps Institution of Oceanography. She is an interdisciplinary climate change scientist who combines quantitative modeling and large data set analysis techniques applied to social and physical systems. Her research focuses on how uncertainty and heterogeneity, both in the projected impacts of climate change and in preferences for how to address them, influence strategic incentives in climate policy problems.
David R. Mares, (Ph.D. Harvard University 1982) is Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of California, San Diego, where he is also holds the Institute of the Americas Endowed Chair for Inter-American Affairs and is Director of the Center for Iberian and Latin American Studies. He is also Nonresident Scholar for Latin American Energy Studies at the James A. Baker III Institute for Public Policy, Rice University. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS), and an Associate Fellow of the Inter-American Dialogue. Professor Mares’ research and teaching interests include Latin American energy politics the political economy of drug policy, defense policy, civil-military relations, terrorism, and the use of photographic imagery in politics.

S. Deborah Kang received her B.A. from the College Scholar Program at Cornell University, an M.A. from the Jurisprudence and Social Policy Program at UC Berkeley, and her Ph.D. in United States History from UC Berkeley. She is currently an associate professor in the History Department at California State University, San Marcos. Her current research focuses on the relationship between law and society along the nation’s northern and southern borders and has been supported by research grants from the Huntington Library and the Clements Center for Southwest Studies. Kang is the author of The INS on the Line: Making Immigration Law on the US-Mexico Border, 1917-1954 (Oxford University Press, 2017).

Rafael Fernández de Castro is the Director of the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies and Professor at the School of Global Policy and Strategy at the University of California San Diego. Prior to this position, he served as the Chair of the International Studies Department at the Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México (ITAM). He is the founding editor of Foreign Affairs Latinoamérica magazine. From 2008 to 2011, he served as the Foreign Affairs Advisor to the President of Mexico. From August 2014 to June of 2017, he held the Dave Moskowitz Endowed Chair in Mexico-US Relations, Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University. Dr. Fernández de Castro holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Georgetown University, a M.A. degree in Public Policy from the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin, and a B.A. degree in Social Sciences from ITAM. He has been awarded two Fulbright scholarships and the Public Service Award from the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.